

38.04.02 Management

Nuclear Technology Management

Program objective:

Master managerial and technical competencies for public and corporate governance, international cooperation and business processes engineering and reengineering following the interests of nuclear global business.

Competitive advantages:

- Study of information, analytical, organizational, managerial and innovative activities in the field of improving management processes and promising nuclear energy technologies;
- introducing the research results into the market and commercializing research developments;
- an IAEA certificate developed by the International Academy of Nuclear Management.

Practical training and research research, design and production enterprises of the nuclear industry and international organizations (ROSATOM State Corporation, IAEA, World Nuclear University, International Center for Theoretical Physics, etc.)