

5.2.3 Regional and sectoral economics

Accounting, auditing and economic statistics

Program objective

The aim of the program is to conduct research in the field of accounting methodology and auditing, in the field of economic activity analysis and economic statistics.

Key research areas:

- Conceptual foundations, theory, methodology, organization, history of accounting development;
- National and international accounting systems and standards;
- Formation features of accounting (financial, managerial, tax) reporting by industries, territories and other segments of economic activity;
- Comprehensive economic and financial analysis of economic activity. Assessment of the effectiveness of economic entities;
- Monitoring, analysis and evaluation of business changes;
- Audit;
- Methods of audit, control and revision. Classifiers of distortions in accounting and auditing;
- Regulation and standardization of audit, control and audit rules;
- Modern digital and information technologies in accounting and analysis;
- Ethics and independence issues in accounting and auditing activities;
- Economic statistics. National and international statistical systems and standards. Statistics of national accounts;
- Regulation and standardization of statistical reporting;
- Formation features of statistical reporting by industries, territories and other segments of economic activity;
- The construction methodology of statistical indicators and indicator systems;
- Application of modern information and communication technologies in the field of economic statistics;
- Applied statistical research in economics. Statistical support of management decisions.